

About the author of this book:

WILL HENRY was born in Jackson County, Missouri, and grew up completely absorbed then, as now, in the world of the Old West. As a young man he roamed through the West ranching, prospecting and mine-blacksmithing. He settled finally in California, where for a while he wrote for motion pictures. Since then he has had sixteen novels published, including No Survivors and Who Rides With Wyatt, and several short stories.

The Texas Rangers is Mr. Henry's second book for young people, the first being Wolf-Eye, published in 1951.

About the illustrator of this book:

CHARLES BANKS WILSON, illustrator of many historical books for young people, is a native Oklahoman. His paintings of Indian life are in the permanent collections of the Metropolitan Museum, Smithsonian Institution, and the Library of Congress. He has painted from life Indians throughout the United States. His mural of the Mountain Men hangs in the Teton National Park, Jackson Lake Lodge, Wyoming.
