

About the author of this book:

HAROLD LAMB is well qualified to write about the Cossacks, for he has been interested in their history for many years and has written numerous books about Eastern Europe and Western Asia. Among his many titles are The March of Muscovy, The City and the Tsar, and, in 1958, Hannibal: One Man Against Rome. He has authored the World Landmark Book, Genghis Khan and the Mongol Horde.

Mr. Lamb has traveled through Cossack country where he studied manuscripts of native Ukrainian historians. He also lived for a time on the Persian shore of the Caspian Sea. His books have been translated into Turkish, Persian, Arabic and Urdu.

Harold Lamb was born in New Jersey and attended Columbia University. At the present time he lives in California.

About the illustrator of this book:

ROBERT FRANKENBERG was born in Mount Vernon, New York. At present he is head of the illustration department of the School of Visual Arts. He has illustrated more than sixty books, including Queen Victoria for World Landmark Books.