

Modern Art and the Death of a Culture

By H. R. Rookmaaker

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Publisher's Foreword

Introduction

1. The Message in the Medium
 - The Icon
 - Beyond History
 - Painting is More Than Art Alone
 - Two Landscapes
 - Two World-Views

2. The Roots of Contemporary Culture
 - Christianisty and Culture
 - Gnosticism and Mysticism
 - A Dualism of Nature and Grace
 - The Reformation Attitude
 - Before the Enlightenment
 - Science
 - TheAge of Reason
 - Man in the Box

3. The First Step of Modern Art
 - On from Impressionism
 - The Quest for Reality
 - The Quest for a Synthesis
 - A Mystic-Romantic Reaction

4. The Second Step to Modern Art
 - On from Impressionism
 - The Quest for Reality
 - The Quest for a Synthesis
 - A Mystic-Romantic Reaction

5. The Last Steps to Modern Art
 - Expressionism
 - Developments in Germany
 - Abstraction
 - Cubism
 - The Quest for Absolutes
 - The Decisive Step
 - Four Reactions

6. Into the New Era
 - A New Art for New Needs
 - A New Art with a New Message
 - The Irrationality of the Rational
 - The Surrealist Protest
 - Surreality and Christian Reality
 - The Real and the Horrible
 - A Different Twentieth-Century Response

7. Modern Art and Twentieth-Century Revolt
 - Abstract Expressionism
 - The Skeleton of Achilles
 - Two British Artists
 - Pop and Op
 - Happenings and Hippies
 - Jazz, Blues and Beat

8. Protest, Revolution and the Christian Response
 - The Search for Humanity
 - Plastic People
 - Beyond the Material
 - Drugs—and Religion
 - What is Normal?
 - The Tragic Protest
 - The Permissive Society
 - Apocalypse
 - Toward a Renewal of the Church

9. Faith and Art
 - Christianity in Art
 - The Role of Art
 - Questions of Aesthetics and Morals
 - Norms and Structures in Art
 - The Christian Artist
 - The Christian in a Changing World