

About the author of this book:

EUGENE RACHLIS was born in Roxbury, Massachusetts, and educated in the Boston public schools and at Boston University. He joined the Washington Bureau of International News Service in 1941. Following his service in World War II, he was associated in a variety of ways with the writing and informational fields: Washington correspondent for the Chicago Sun; staff editor for the New York Times Magazine; associate editor of Collier's; and managing editor of the Woman's Home Companion.

Mr. Rachlis is coauthor of Peter Stuyvesant and His New York, as well as author of They Came to Kill, both published by Random House. Among his children's books are The Story of the U.S. Coast Guard, a Landmark Book, and Indians of the Plains. At present he lives in Manhattan with his wife and two sons.

About the illustrator of this book:

H. B. VESTAL's talented brush strokes can be found in most national magazines. Two of his best-known books are The Illustrated Book of Africa and Exploring for Lost Treasure. He lives in New Jersey but dreams of someday sailing around the world with his wife and his son Peter. Mr. Vestal also illustrated for Random House the Beginner Book, Look Out For Pirates!