The Bondage of the Will

I) Introduction (W.A. 600-602)

II) Review of Erasmus' Preface (W.A. 603-639)

- i) Of the Necessity of Assertions in Christianity (603-605)
- ii) Of the Perspicuity of Scripture (606-609)
- iii) Of the Importance of Knowing What Power Free-Will Has (609-614)
- iv) Of the Necessitating Foreknowledge of God (614-618)
- v) Of the Importance of Knowing that God Necessitates All Things (618-620)
- vi) Of the Alleged Advantages of Suppressing Certain truths (620-630)
- vii) Of the Alleged Disadvantages of Proclaiming that God Necessitates All Things (630-634)
- viii) Of the Spontaneity of Necessitated Act (634-635)
- ix) That a Will Which Has No Power Without Grace is Not Free (635-638)
- x) Conclusion of the Section (638-639)

III) Review of Erasmus' Introduction

- i) That the Authority of Antiquity Can Be No Sure Proof of 'Free Will' (639-661)
- ii) That the Church, Which is Hidden from Man's View, Does Not Err (649-652)
- iii) That All Doctrines Must be Tested and Judged by Scripture (652-653)
- iv) That the Teaching of Scripture is Clear and Decisive (653-658)
- v) That the Blindness of Man Does Not Disprove the Clarity of Scripture (658-659)
- vi) Of the Inconsistency of Erasmus in Appealing to Antiquity (659-661)

IV) Review of Erasmus' Arguments For Free- Will (W.A. 661-699)

- i) Of Erasmus' Definition of 'Free Will' (661-666)
- ii) Eccclus. 15.14-17: An Inconclusive Testimony (666-667)
- iii) Of Erasmus' Distinction of Three Views about 'Free-Will (667-671)
- iv) Eccclus. 15.14-17 (contd.): man, as Subject to the Will of God, is Not Free (671-672)
- v) That a Command Does Not Always Imply Ability to Fulfill it (673-674)
- vi) The Erasmus' Argument, if Valid, Would Establish Plenary Ability (674-676)
- vii) Gen. 4.7: Obligation Does Not Imply Ability (676)
- viii) Deut. 30.19, ect.: the Law is Designed to Give Knowledge of Sin (676-680)
- ix) Of Erasmus' Confusion of Law and Gospel in Zech. 1.1, Jer3 15.19, Ezek. 18.23, ect. (680-684)
- x) Of God Preached and Not Preached, and of His Revealed and Secret Will (684-686)
- xi) Deut. 30.11-14: Obligation is No Evidence for Ability (686-688)
- xii) Matt. 23.37: Man Must Not Pry into the Secret Will of God (688-690)
- xiii) Matt. 19.17: the Law Indicates the Impotence of Man, and Saving Power of God (690-691)
- xiv) That the Purpose of Precepts Under the New testament is to Guide the Justified (692-693)
- xv) That the Ground of Reward Under the New Testament is the Promise of God, Not the Merit of Man (693-696)
- xvi) Matt. 7.16; Luke 23.34; John 1.12; Rom. 2.4; Necessity Does Not Destroy Moral Responsibility

V) Review of Erasmus' Treatment of Texts That Deny 'Free Will'—(I) (W.A. 699-733)

- i) Of Erasmus' Evaluation of the Texts in Question (699-700)
- ii) That Figures of Speech May Not Be Postulated in Scripture Without Adequate Reason (700-703)
- iii) Of Erasmus' Explanation of the Hardening of Pharaoh (703-709)
- iv) Of God's Method of Working Evil in Man (709-710)
- v) Of God's Method of Hardening Man (710-711)
- vi) Of the Hardening of Pharaoh (711-714)
- vii) Rom. 9.15ff.: Proof that Paul Teaches the Necessitating Foreknowledge of God (714-718)
- viii) That Natural Reason Must Admit that Divine Freedom Implies Human Necessity (718-719)
- ix) Rom. 9.15ff. (contd.) (719-720)
- x) That Necessity Does Not Involve Compulsion: the Case of Judas (720-722)
- xi) Mal. 1.2-3: Rightly Quoted by Paul to Prove the Sovereignty of God in Grace (722-733)
- xii) Of the Potter and the Clay (727-729)
- xiii) Of the Righteousness of God in Justifying and Condemning Sinners (729-731)

VI) Review of Erasmus' Treatment of Texts that Deny 'Free Will' – (II) (W.A. 733-756)

- i) Gen. 6.3: the Meaning of 'Flesh' (733-736)
- ii) Gen. 8.21 and 6.5: the Corruption of Mankind (736)
- iii) Isa. 40.1-2: Man Under the Law Can Only Sin (736-739)
- iv) Isa. 40.6-7: Man is Altogether 'Flesh' (739-745)
- v) Jer. 10.23: the Impotence of Man (745-746)
- vi) Prov. 16.1, 21.1: the Sovereignty of God Over Man (746-748)
- vii) John 15.5: the Meaning of 'Nothing' (748-753)
- viii) That "Free-Will" Does Not Follow From Man's Co-Operation with God (753-755)
- ix) Conclusion of this Section (756)

VII) The Bible Doctrine of the Bondage of the Will (W.A. 756-786)

- i) Rom. 1.18ff.: the Universal Guilt of Mankind Disproves 'Free-Will' (756-760)
- ii) Rom. 3.9ff., 19.: the Universal Dominion of Sin Disproves 'Free-Will' (760-764)
- iii) That the 'Works' Which Justify are not Merely Ceremonial Works (764-766)
- iv) That the Law is Designed the Lead to Christ by Giving Knowledge of Sin (766-767)
- v) Rom. 3.21-26: the Doctrine of Salvation by Faith in Christ Disproves 'Free-Will' (767-769)
- vi) That the Pelagian doctrine of Merit is Less Vicious than that of the Scholastics and Erasmus (769-711)
- vii) Rom. 4.2-3: the Total Irrelevance of Works to Man's Righteousness Before God (771-772)
- viii) Of Other Arguments Against 'Free-Will', not here Developed (772-773)
- ix) Of Paul's Cogency Against 'Free-Will' (773-774)
