

Messianic Character of American Education

By Rousas John Rushdoony

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Preface

Introductory: By Ivan R. Bierly

1. A Liberal Education
2. The “Divine Rights” of Education
3. Horace Mann and Messianic Character of American Education
4. James G. Carter: An Engine to Sway the People
5. Edward A. Sheldon: Oswego and the Secular School
6. Henry Barnard: The Wheeling of the Spheres
7. William Torrey Harris: The State and the True Self of Man
8. John Swett: The Self-Preservation of the State
9. Charles De Garmo: Morality as Social Adjustment
10. Col. Francis Wayland Parker: The Divine Child in the Divine State
11. William James: Education and Conditioning
12. Nicholas Murray Butler: Education for the State
13. G. Stanley Hall: The Child-Centered Society
14. Herman Harrell Horne: Man and the Universal
15. John Dewey’s New Jerusalem: “The Great Community”
16. J. B. Watson: Science and Utopia
17. Carleton Washburne: Education to Save Democracy
18. Edward Lee Thorndike: Education as a Science
19. Boyd H. Bode: “Is Progressivism a New Absolutism?”
20. William Heard Kilpatrick: The Repeal of the Past
21. Harold O. Rugg: Democracy as a Messianic Religion
22. George S. Counts: Who Shall Control Education?
23. Theodore Brameld: Democracy and Consensus
24. The Kindergarten: Model for a New Eden
25. Is the University Beyond the Law?
26. The Freedom of Higher Education
27. “Education as a Religion”
28. The Lowest Common Denominator

Appendix: By David L. Hoggan.

A Selective Commentary on Principle Individuals Mentioned or Cited in Narrative Text

Index