Dedication

This book is dedicated to my husband, David Larsen, who faithfully read every chapter, corrected my mistakes, and taught me more than I ever needed to know about the history of the first-century world. Thank you for your love and patience as I wrote this and all the earlier books.

Introduction

Everyone loves a story. You clutch the book tighter, and your eyes speed across the page as the plot thickens. The villain is creeping closer, and with danger all around him, there seems to be no escape for the hapless hero. There's nothing you can do to stop the inevitable peril awaiting him, but you read on and on, knowing something good must happen. You, of course, took a peek at the last page of the book, so you know how the book ends and that the hero escapes from the clutches of the evil villain.

What could be better than delving deep into an exciting adventure story? Here's what's better: being part of an exciting adventure story and knowing that what you do makes a difference in the outcome.

God tells us His story in the Bible. The Bible isn't just a history book detailing everything that has happened since the world began, or an almanac listing all the facts about everything, or a theology book explaining in a systematic way who God is and what He has done. In part, the Bible is all those things—historical events, important facts, and theological ideas—but it's much, much more. The Bible is a very personal story that God has written to the people He loves in a very intimate way.

Though God has always existed, the story He shares with us begins with His creation of the world and everything in it. God's story took a sad turn when His beautiful world became spoiled by sin. But God wasn't surprised; He had planned that part of the story, too. He's sovereign and nothing happens by accident.

The holy God is a covenant keeper. His entire story wraps around His promise to send a Savior that would bring His sinful people back to Him. As part of His covenant, God promised to dwell with, protect, and show mercy to those He loved. And God was faithful to His promise, generation after generation. Not so were His wayward people.

The holy God is the King over all the earth.² Even when His people had a human king to rule them, God made it clear that He was the Great King, the only One deserving of worship and complete devotion. Good kings ruled, doing so under the authority of the Almighty God.

Bible Basics

What Is the Covenant?

The covenant is God's solemn promise to His people, saying, "I will be your God and You will be My People."¹ With this promise God commits to dwell with, protect, and show love and mercy to His people.

1. See Exodus 6:7.

2. See Isaiah 37:16.

Bad kings ruled, doing just as they pleased. They led the people away from God. All this was in preparation for God Himself to come as King in the person of Jesus Christ, the Messiah.

Jesus Christ was different from all other kings. He didn't wear a kingly robe or sit on a throne or command a mighty army. This king looked like an ordinary man and His followers were a bunch of ragtag fishermen, farmers, and tax collectors. He healed people, chased away demons, and obeyed God perfectly. This perfect King then died a horrible death so that the people He loved wouldn't have to die for their sin. He took away their guilt and gave them His righteousness.

Just before He went back to heaven, He said these words to His disciples: "As the Father has sent Me, so I send you into the world. Tell people about Me, make disciples for Me, and finish the work that I started on this earth."³

The story that began in Genesis and was fulfilled through Jesus' life as recorded in the gospels continued in the book of Acts through the work of the apostles and those who came to believe in Jesus through them.

It is through the covenant and Jesus' Great Commission that you, too, become part of God's story. God's story is a living, continuing story. When you believe in Jesus, God weaves your story into the greater story of the gospel. You and I are related to Father Abraham and are blessed because of God's covenant promises to bless the world through him. You and I are in the line of the apostles. The apostles told people about Jesus who told people who told people who told people and many centuries later you were also told about Jesus. The adventures of Peter and Paul are like the adventures of people today who take the gospel to their neighbors nearby and to strangers at the ends of the earth.

And what happens when you and I and people in the farthest parts of the earth believe in Jesus Christ? Amazingly, we all become children of God.⁴ All around the globe we have spiritual brothers and sisters of all races and nationalities, and together we form the family of God.

It's not always easy being a child of God. Some people will dislike us simply because we love Jesus, but as we experience difficult things because of our faith, we are sharing in the suffering that Jesus suffered for us. The Bible says that all God's children are heirs of His glorious kingdom, and as we suffer because of the name of Jesus, we will someday share in Christ's glory.⁵

God's written story ended with the last page of Revelation, but God has a continuing story. He's putting together a family and is building a kingdom, and you and I are part of that family and that kingdom. The gospel adventure lives on today through you and me.

Apologetics and the Truth Detectives

Questions, questions, questions. Have you ever had questions about God or the Bible? Have you ever wondered if God exists or if what the Bible says is true? If so, be assured you're not the only one to have such questions. Through the ages, biblical scholars, church leaders, ordinary people, and even atheists have asked questions and sought answers about God and the Bible.

Faith is a strange thing. By faith you believe that God exists and that He created everything in heaven and on earth. By faith you believe that the Bible is true and that Jesus Christ is both God and man. By faith you believe that Jesus died for your sins and that by believing in Him, you can have your sins forgiven.

What makes faith so strange is that you believe these things even though you've never seen them with your own eyes.¹ You weren't alive when God created the heavens and the earth, and you didn't live in ancient Palestine when Jesus walked upon the earth, healing people and teaching about the kingdom of God. How can you believe these things to be true if you weren't there to see them?

No one can prove that God is real or that He created the world. On the other hand, no one can prove that He's not real. What a person believes about the existence of God and who God is, he or she believes by faith.

How Do You Have Faith?

Without God's help, no one can have faith in Him. Human hearts are stubborn and don't want to believe in God. Faith in God starts when the Holy Spirit takes a hard, unbelieving heart and makes it soft and able to believe in Him. The Holy Spirit changes sinful hearts and opens blind spiritual eyes so that a person can believe the truth about God as it is explained in the Bible. With the help of the Holy Spirit, you and I can have faith in things we haven't seen. God gives His people the gift of faith.²

With new spiritual eyes, you are able to live by faith. Yet walking by faith isn't easy, and sometimes you might have doubts or questions. Asking questions isn't wrong. In fact, it's helpful to ask questions because asking good questions and working hard to find the answers makes your faith stronger.

Greek Speaks Apologetics

The word "apologetics" comes from the Greek word apologia, which means "defense." Christian apologetics is the practice of gathering information in a logical, reasonable way to defend Christian beliefs.

1. See John 20:29; 2 Corinthians 5:7; 1 Peter 1:8.

2. See Ephesians 2:8-9.

How Do You Find the Answers to Your Questions?

One way to find answers to your spiritual questions is to employ Christian apologetics. Christian apologetics is the practice of gathering information in a logical, reasonable way to defend Christian beliefs. A person who defends the Christian faith to critics and unbelievers who do not believe the Bible is called an apologist. Did you know that every believer is an apologist? While there are some learned scholars who spend a lot of time making logical arguments about Christianity and defending the Bible, everyone who believes in Jesus should understand what he or she believes and should be able to defend his or her beliefs.

Facts About Apologetics

1. Every believer should know how to defend his faith.³
2. Knowing how to defend your faith takes time, diligence, and study.⁴
3. When defending your faith, you should remember that the Holy Spirit will give you the right words to speak when you need them.⁵
4. Developing good apologetics will help you strengthen your faith, resist temptation, and tell others about Jesus.

One thing that you need to understand is that even when you pursue answers using apologetics, not all questions, particularly some “why” questions, can be answered. Questions about things like why God seems so far away and why bad things happen when we’re trying to do what’s right aren’t easy to answer. Sometimes you have to shrug your shoulders and say, “God is bigger and wiser than I am. He has all the answers, but He hasn’t given me the answer to that question.” God’s thoughts and ways are higher than man’s ways, and when He doesn’t give an answer to a question, all His children still must believe that He is good and that He knows what He is doing.⁶

Do you remember Job? He had many “why” questions. However, instead of answering Job’s questions, God asked questions of Job. God asked these questions to show Job how big, great, and powerful He is.⁷ When God stopped asking questions, Job humbly said, “Surely I spoke of things I did not understand, things too wonderful for me to know.”⁸

Even though no one can answer all the why questions, the Bible gives you all the information you need to know about who God is, what He expects of you, and what it means to trust in Him.⁹ It is possible, through clear thinking and good research, to build logical arguments that show that the Bible is true, that there are no contradictions in the Bible, and that an intelligent, reasonable person can accept the Bible as truth.

So, we’ve established that asking questions is good, but how do you ask good questions?

3. See 1 Peter 3:15.

4. See 2 Timothy 3:14-16.

5. See Matthew 10:19-20.

6. See Isaiah 55:9-11; Romans 11:33-36.

7. See Job 38-42.

8. Job 42:3.

9. See 2 Peter 1:3-4.

Step 1:

Ask good questions with the right attitude. When you ask questions, have a humble attitude that says, “I’m confused. I don’t understand. Help me, Lord Jesus, to know what is right and true.” When you ask God to show you more about who He is, be sure that you ask in a respectful, reverent way, never forgetting that God is so much bigger and wiser than you are. Ask questions with a heart of faith. Be like the man who asked Jesus to heal his demon-possessed son and said, “I do believe; help me overcome my unbelief.”¹⁰ Ask the Holy Spirit to give you more faith and teach you what is true.¹¹ Never forget that the purpose for asking questions is to come to know the Almighty God better, not to satisfy your curiosity.

Step 2:

Use good research methods. Good research begins by using the Bible to prove that the Bible is true. Does that seem strange? The Bible was written over a period of 1,600 years by forty different authors. The fact that one part of the Bible agrees with another part of the Bible makes what the Bible says believable. For example, Jesus quoted the prophets,¹² Moses,¹³ and the psalmists.¹⁴ The gospel writers and the writers of the epistles quoted verses from the Old Testament as well.¹⁵ The New Testament cites numerous examples of how an event in Jesus’ life was a fulfillment of Old Testament prophecy.¹⁶ In fact, Jesus fulfilled more than 100 prophecies, and the odds of this happening is almost beyond a person’s ability to calculate.

If there appears to be a contradiction in the Bible, it’s important to look for a way to understand the “contradictory verses” in the context of the entire Bible. God never contradicts Himself, and He never changes His mind. That means that after comparing one passage to another, ideas that appear to contradict each other should somehow fit together, and what seemed to be a contradiction will make logical sense.

One more important thing: knowing the meaning of the original Greek or Hebrew words can clear up some misunderstandings. Once you know the meaning of the Greek or Hebrew words from which our English translation comes, some verses make more sense, and seeming contradictions disappear. While not too many people understand Greek and Hebrew and can read the Bible in its original languages, there are commentaries and reference books that can help you understand what the original Greek and Hebrew words mean.

Keep in mind that sometimes no matter how hard you try, you can’t figure out what the Bible is really saying. Biblical scholars who spend their lives trying to understand the Bible

10. See Mark 9:14-27.

11. See John 16:13.

12. See Matthew 10:35; 12:7, 17-21.

13. See Matthew 13:13; 22:37-39.

14. See Matthew 22:43-44.

15. See Matthew 8:17; Mark 1:2-3; Luke 4:18-19; Romans 14:11; 2 Corinthians 6:16-18; James 2:8; 1 Peter 2:10-12.

16. See Matthew 2:6; 4:15-16; Mark 7:6-7; Luke 3:4-6; John 12:14-15.

don't have all the answers and learned, godly men and women don't always agree on what certain Bible passages mean.

So what are you to do? There are three important things to remember: 1) All Scripture is God-breathed (which means it is inspired by God) and is useful for teaching and correcting you as you live each day for the Lord. Even if you can't understand a certain passage, you can be sure that it is God's Word.¹⁷ 2) God is bigger and wiser than you and I are. You will never totally understand everything about God and Scripture. You must accept that not all your questions will be resolved, and your understanding of God will always be incomplete.¹⁸ 3) There are secret things and mysteries that God has not revealed to us. These things belong to God alone. But, in the Bible God has made clear everything necessary for you to come to faith in Jesus and to live for Jesus by His grace each day.¹⁹

Doing good research also means using good resources. Resources may include books written by people who have asked the same questions that you have asked. After serious thought and research, these people have found the answers to their questions and have written down what they learned in books that you can read for yourself.³ Other resources could include a wise person such as a parent, a pastor, a grandparent, or a youth leader who can help you find the answers to your questions.

As part of your research, you could study archeological discoveries and historical evidence that proves that the events and the people mentioned in the Bible real happened.⁴

Step 3:

Be prepared to think hard. Good apologetics requires time, diligence, and serious thought. Some answers won't be found until you have read the Bible or commentaries that explain what the verses mean, thought about what you learned, and prayed about the question. A good apologist can't be lazy or have a sloppy mind. Clear, logical thinking is essential. You must give nothing but the best of your mind to the Lord when you are seeking His answers to your questions.

Step 4:

Remember to thank the Lord for the answers He gives you. No one can understand spiritual truths without God's help. When your beliefs are confirmed by evidence inside and outside of the Bible, praise Him for the wisdom you received from Him.

Keep these four steps in mind and you will be a good apologist and a wise person.

Chloe and Oliver: The Truth Detectives

Let me introduce to you two young people who, like you, have had many good, but hard, questions. Chloe and Oliver, eleven-year-old twins, are believers in Jesus Christ, and along with their grandfather, called Grampy, they have been reading the book of Acts. They were amazed by the events of Pentecost and by the courage of the apostles to stand up for what they believed, even when it meant imprisonment and even death. But as they followed the adventures of Peter and Paul, they had serious questions. Is the Bible really true? Why is Jesus the only way for salvation?

Wearing their Truth Detectives caps, Chloe and Oliver dig deep into scripture and research history and archeology to find the answers to their questions. Wise Grampy is always nearby, ready to give them information they might have missed and to help them organize their thoughts in a logical way. At the end of each unit of God's Great Covenant, New Testament 2, you can read one of their dialogues (conversations), which shows how they went from asking a question to discovering the answer.

UNIT I

The Gospel Adventure . . . The Mission

THEME: Our mission is to proclaim God’s gospel to the world.

UNIT KEY VERSE:

“But you will receive power when the Holy Spirit comes on you; and you will be my witnesses in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and to the ends of the earth.” (Acts 1:8)

We’re going on an adventure together that begins on the cobbled streets of Jerusalem in the shadows of the great temple walls and moves up and down the Roman highways all the way to the imperial city of Rome. This adventure has a purpose, a mission so to speak, and all the men and women we will learn about had a strong determination to accomplish this mission despite many difficulties and obstacles along their way. So, what is a mission? A mission is “a task that a person or group of people are charged to accomplish.”

What does an adventurer need for his mission? To complete his mission, an adventurer needs a good map and an experienced guide. He must wear the proper clothes and have adequate protection from the dangers along the way. He must have the skills and knowledge to survive in a perilous and often unpredictable environment. Along the way the adventurer may encounter enemies who try to prevent him from accomplishing his task, so the journey requires endurance and perseverance until the adventurer reaches the final destination.

Our study of Acts will be a gospel adventure as we follow the story of Jesus’ continuing ministry through His apostles. Before He ascended to heaven, Jesus gave His disciples a mission, saying, “You will be my witnesses in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and to the ends of the earth.”¹ Then before the eyes of the disciples, Jesus rose up from the Mount of Olives into the sky. A cloud hid Jesus from their sight, and He was gone!² Jesus entrusted these faithful believers with the mission of spreading the gospel to the whole world.

Before we begin the story of the gospel’s journey, we will examine the people involved in the story of Acts and the world which God had especially prepared to receive the message.

1. Acts 1:8.

2. See Acts 1:9.

Three men played key roles in this completion of God's story begun in Genesis. Luke, the doctor and historian, wrote the book of Acts. Peter, the impulsive fisherman turned bold apostle, preached faithfully in Jerusalem, Judea, and Samaria despite opposition and imprisonment. Paul, Pharisee and murderer transformed into passionate missionary, took the gospel into Gentile territory, suffering ridicule, misunderstanding, and persecution everywhere he went. Though the enemies of the gospel were strong and persistent, nothing stopped the spread of the message for very long.

God had prepared the first-century world for the gospel. There was no shortage of gods to worship. People had a choice of Roman, Greek, or even Egyptian gods, and if those weren't sufficient, one could always worship the Caesar himself. But some people were looking for something more—a personal God who also was strong and mighty.

The political world of the Roman Empire made it possible to travel great distances and, generally speaking, a traveler arrived at his destination safely. Good roads linked the small kingdoms and provinces to each other, and since most people spoke Greek, understanding each other wasn't difficult.

In unit I of God's Great Covenant, New Testament 2 we will see that it wasn't an accident that the history and geography of the first century made it the perfect time and place for the spread of the gospel. We will see how God's story of redemption went from being primarily the story of God's covenant love for the Jewish people to being the message of hope for the whole world. We will also see how the covenant promises given to Abraham by the covenant-keeping God stretched to include the nations of the world.

Unit I Memory Verse Passage

Romans 10:9-15

- 9 That if you confess with your mouth, “Jesus is Lord,” and believe in your heart that God raised him from the dead, you will be saved.
- 10 For it is with your heart that you believe and are justified, and it is with your mouth that you confess and are saved.
- 11 As the scripture says, “Anyone who trusts in him will never be put to shame.”
- 12 For there is no difference between Jew and Gentile—the same Lord is Lord of all and richly blesses all who call on him,
- 13 for, “Everyone who calls on the name of the Lord will be saved.”
- 14 How, then can they call on the one they have not believed in? And how can they believe in the one of whom they have not heard? And how can they hear without someone preaching to them?
- 15 And how can they preach unless they are sent? As it is written, “How beautiful are the feet of those who bring good news!”

THE OLD TESTAMENT IN THE NEW TESTAMENT REVEALED:

And I will put enmity between you and the woman, and between your offspring and hers; he will crush your head, and you will strike his heel.” (Genesis 3:15)

In the Garden of Eden, where sin began, the LORD God promised a Savior. In the gospels, the LORD God fulfilled His promise—Jesus Christ died on the cross for His people’s sin. In Acts the LORD God, through the apostles and the new believers, took the good news of a Savior into the world.

The Book of Acts and Its Author

Did you ever play the “what if” game? What if it snows tomorrow and there’s no school? “Great,” you say, “I won’t have to take my history test.” What if the snow is two feet deep, and everyone is snowbound for days? “Oh no,” you exclaim, “my birthday party will be cancelled!”

Of course, there are bigger “what if” questions than these. What if your mother and father hadn’t married each other? What if you were an only child instead of being part of a big, noisy family? There are many “what if” questions, but one thing is certain: God is in control of the world and nothing happens by accident.

Greek Speaks

The Greek word εὐαγγέλιον (euangelion) means “good news.” The word “gospel” comes from the Greek word euangelion and means “good message.” The New Testament writers used the word gospel to mean “the good news of Jesus’ salvation.” Jesus’ good news is that He died to take the punishment for your sin. By God’s grace you can be forgiven of your sin and by that same grace you can live each day in a way that pleases Jesus.¹

Here’s a “what if” question: What if Luke hadn’t written the book of Acts? Without Acts we’d have many unanswered questions. We’d wonder what happened to the eleven disciples after Jesus went back to heaven. We’d scratch our heads and ask, “How could a few Jewish believers in Jerusalem take the gospel to Gentiles throughout Asia Minor, Greece, and all the way to Rome?”

The book of Acts is a bridge that connects the gospel story in Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John to the letters, or epistles, written by Paul and the other apostles. Without Acts the gospel story would stop abruptly at Jesus’ resurrection. Without Acts we would have the wisdom of the epistles but know little about the men who wrote them and the people who received them.

At the beginning of Acts, Luke wrote to the most excellent Theophilus, saying: “In my former book [the Gospel of Luke], Theophilus, I wrote about all that Jesus began to do and to teach until the day he was taken up to heaven.”² In other words, Luke tells the story of Jesus’ three years of ministry on earth in his gospel, and then in Acts, Luke tells the story of all Jesus continued to do and teach through His faithful believers.

1. See Ephesians 2:1-10.

2. See Acts 1:1-2.

During His lifetime, Jesus preached the gospel throughout Palestine with these words: “The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand. Repent, and believe in the gospel.”³ In Acts the apostles and new disciples preached the gospel everywhere they went. Jews and Gentiles, slaves and kings, men and women—the apostles and disciples spoke to all who would listen. As the gospel message went forth, the gospel messengers had many adventures: shipwrecks, miraculous escapes from prison, encounters with sorcerers—all this and more happened and is written about in the book of Acts.

Jesus Christ, the God-Man, fulfilled all the Old Testament prophecies. Then, by His death and resurrection, He purchased salvation for all God’s people and ushered in the new covenant. Acts further explains the new covenant and completes God’s covenant story, which began in Genesis 3:15.

Before we begin the story of Acts, we must answer some important questions. In this chapter we’ll answer two questions: 1) Who was Luke? and 2) Why did he write the book of Acts to Theophilus?

Who Was Luke?

Most authorities, both ancient and present, agree that Luke wrote the book of Acts. Luke, the only Gentile writer of the New Testament, wrote more than 25 percent of the New Testament. Not only did he write more pages than any other writer, but he is the only writer who begins with Jesus’ birth in his gospel and continues the story all the way to Paul’s imprisonment in Rome as recorded in Acts 28. So who was Luke and by what authority does he write these two books?

Luke, a Greek, was born in Antioch in Syria about the same time as Jesus and Paul. His name, Luke, is a shorter form of the Latin name Lucius. He was a highly educated man, well-schooled in both the Greek language and culture and the Hebrew scriptures. He had a large vocabulary, using Greek words no other biblical writer used.

Luke was also an elegant writer, writing in classical Greek, while being able to switch when necessary to a simpler style of writing. He received a medical education, possibly at the University of Tarsus.

Luke was a historian. His gospel is an orderly account of Jesus’ life, with all the events in chronological order. He interviewed eyewitnesses to be certain of his facts, and he personally investigated the events. It’s safe to assume that Luke wrote Acts with the same historical carefulness with which he wrote his gospel.

Luke must have been a great traveler. Whether it was sailing on the sea as he did with Paul in Acts 27 or trekking through Asia Minor and Macedonia on Paul's missionary journeys, he knew the geography of the Roman world well.

Luke cared deeply about people. He had a pastor's heart and wanted people to know Jesus. As a doctor, he had compassion on the sick and handicapped. In his gospel, Luke wrote about the healings Jesus performed and in Acts he wrote about those that Peter and Paul performed. In a culture in which women were unimportant, Luke included their stories in his books, writing more about women than any other New Testament writer. In Acts we read about Dorcas, Lydia, and Priscilla.⁴ Even the slave girl in Philippi had an important place in his writing.⁵

No one knows when Luke became a believer in Jesus, but possibly he believed after listening to Paul preach in Antioch. He was one of Paul's closest friends and at times Paul's companion on his missionary trips. His medical training was a huge help to Paul when they traveled together.

In Acts, Luke emphasized three things: the Holy Spirit, prayer, and the sovereign plan of God. He wanted everyone to know that it was the Holy Spirit who guided and gave power to the church. He believed that a true church prayed because dependence upon God is necessary for a church to grow. In all his writing, Luke firmly believed that all events are part of God's redemptive plan. As you study Acts look for passages that mention these three things.

Who Was Theophilus and Why Did Luke Write to Him?

Luke wrote his gospel so that Theophilus might have "an orderly account" of Jesus' ministry and that he might "know the certainty of the things [he had] been taught."⁶ Although Luke never saw Jesus in person, the Holy Spirit helped him write an accurate and orderly account of Jesus' life because he talked to eyewitnesses who had spent time with Jesus. Luke wrote his second book to Theophilus because he knew the gospel story wouldn't be complete without an account of Jesus' continuing ministry through His disciples.

4. See Acts 9:32-42, 16:11-15, 18:18-28.

5. See Acts 16:16-19.

6. See Luke 1:1-4.

The name “Theophilus” comes from two Greek words that mean “lover of God” or “friend of God.” The title “most excellent” was given to men of high rank. So, who was Theophilus? No one knows for sure. Theophilus might have been a government official in the Roman imperial court. If this is true, Luke might have used the name to protect Theophilus’s identity. Theophilus might have been a Gentile God-fearer who believed in Israel’s God and had received this name after his baptism. The name “Theophilus” was a name used by both Jews and Gentiles, and it could have been his given name.

Luke wrote his books so that Theophilus would know for certain that Jesus Christ was the Savior promised in the Jewish scriptures. He wanted Theophilus to know that his faith was rooted in historical truth.

UNPACK IT FURTHER: The Meaning of Covenant

God's covenant can be explained in a few words: "I will take you as my own people, and I will be your God" (Exodus 6:7). God promised to be the God of His people. A covenant is like a promise. A covenant, though, is stronger than a promise, because a covenant brings death to the covenant breaker. God has been and always will be faithful to keep His covenant. However, we are not faithful to God, and because of that, we deserve death. God, the Covenant Keeper, died in our place so that we could be part of God's people.

Look up the following Bible verses and, on the lines provided, answer the questions.

1. What does Psalm 145:13 tell us about God?

2. According to Galatians 4:4-5, what did God, the Covenant Keeper, do for us, the covenant breakers?

THE OLD TESTAMENT IN THE NEW TESTAMENT REVEALED:

And everyone who calls on the name of the LORD will be saved;
 for on Mount Zion and in Jerusalem
 there will be deliverance, as the LORD has said,
 among the survivors whom the LORD calls. (Joel 2:32)

The prophet Joel encourages people to call upon “the LORD [Yahweh],” the covenant God of Israel. When the Apostle Paul quotes the prophet Joel (see Romans 10:13) and pleads for us to call upon the name of the Lord, he is referring to Jesus Christ. In making this connection, Paul is saying that Jesus Christ is God, the same God who made the covenant with Israel and who is the one and only true God.¹

Discovering the Message of Acts

It's six o'clock in the evening. If I listen closely I'll hear the chimes of the Methodist church two blocks down the street playing a familiar hymn. Every morning at eight and every evening at six, the chimes ring out crisp and clear. If I continue down the street a few blocks, I can see the bell tower of a gray stone church that stretches skyward as the huge building guards the corner of Derry and Brookfield Streets.

Throughout the city in majestic cathedrals, modest brick chapels, and inconspicuous storefront churches with hand-painted signs, believers gather to worship. Whether the church has a handful of gray-haired faithfuls or a full auditorium of young, energetic worshippers, we ask the same question: Does the book of Acts have anything to say to churches today or is it just a story?

The book of Acts is more than just the story of what the early Church did. It speaks to the Christian church today. The narrative in the book of Acts explains what the gospel is,² who is part of the Christian church,³ and how to present the gospel to unbelievers.⁴ It gives principles about how God wants the gospel to go into the world and how the church is to be in the world.

At the same time we must be careful not to assume that even though God's nature never changes, the ways that He works in history are always the same. One example of how God works differently at different times in history is how He uses miracles. Jesus performed many miracles to show His authority as the Son of God. The apostles performed miracles to show their authority and to start the Church. Throughout the story of the Bible, God worked amazing miracles whenever He gave new revelation to His people and did something important in His plan of redemption. God did miracles at the Exodus, at the birth of Jesus, throughout Jesus' ministry, and at Jesus' His death, resurrection, and ascension. God also did frequent miracles through the apostles during the founding of the Church and the writing of the New Testament.⁵ There are no apostles today, the Church has been established in the world, and scripture is complete so that even though God still does perform miracles today, He doesn't usually do the same kind of miracles as we read about in Acts.

Another way we need to be careful as we read the book of Acts is to not assume that everything the early Church did is something that all Christians today should do. One example of this is that in the beginning of Acts, the believers in Jerusalem sold their possessions and had everything in common.⁶ Although there are times when Christians may consider doing this, the fact that the early Christians lived this way does not mean that Christians today should sell everything they own and live together in one place.

4. See Acts 13:16-48; 17:22-31.

5. See, for example, Acts 2:3-12; 3:1-10; 5:12-16; and so on.

In order to understand the message of Acts for the Church today, we have to consider how the book of Acts fits into Luke's purpose for writing it and how it fits into the rest of Scripture.

What Was Luke's Purpose in Writing Acts?

Luke wrote the Gospel of Luke and the book of Acts to a particular person for a particular purpose. He wanted the "most excellent Theophilus"⁷ to have an accurate, orderly account of the ministry of Jesus Christ so that Theophilus would "know the certainty of the things [he had] been taught."⁸

The book of Acts is not a how-to book on how to run a church. So what is it? It's the true story of the continuing work of Jesus Christ in the world, accomplished through His apostles and disciples. Acts completes the redemptive story begun in Genesis and tells us how God's covenant promises given to Abraham are fulfilled at an actual time in history. Acts teaches us what it means to be a disciple of Jesus, it tells us why the Church is important, and it reminds us that God is with us as we take the gospel to the whole world. It's the end of the story while at the same time it's the beginning of the story.

How Does Acts Fit with the Old Testament?

Peter, Stephen, and Paul were always preaching long sermons, and Luke included some of their sermons in the book of Acts. In these sermons they quoted the ancient prophets and the psalms, retold stories from the Pentateuch, and reminded their listeners of the unfaithfulness of their forefathers.⁹ They showed how Jesus Christ fulfilled the Old Testament prophecies, and they didn't forget to emphasize how faithful the LORD God had been to His people. God's sovereign plan of redemption wove in and out of their speeches, tying the pieces together in a perfect, unified story.

These sermons teach us that the Old Testament and New Testament are not two different stories. There are not two different ways that God has worked throughout history. There are not two different paths of salvation. There are not two different ways that God related to His people. No, the story of the Bible is one story, and the two testaments boldly declare that there's only one covenant and only one God, who never changes.

How Does Acts Fit with the New Testament?

As mentioned in chapter 1, Acts is the bridge between the gospels, which tell the story of Jesus' ministry while He was on earth, and the epistles, which explain and apply Jesus' story. Acts tells us what happened to Peter and some of the other original disciples. It introduces us to Paul, who wrote thirteen of the epistles. Acts provides us with the historical background we need to understand the epistles. While a narrative such as the book of Acts can mention theological truths, it does so only in elementary ways. The letters of Paul, Peter, and other New Testament writers are necessary so that we can understand our Christian beliefs and know how to live as disciples of Jesus Christ.

What Should You Look for as You Read the Book of Acts?

Luke was well-educated in the Greek language and had great skill as a writer. In the book of Acts he uses three important techniques to tell the story.

1. Summary phrases: Luke often paused his stories to insert a summary phrase such as “the Lord added to their number daily”¹⁰ or “so the word of God spread.”¹¹ These words are flashing lights that exclaim, “God is working in so many wonderful ways that I just can't write about them all!” You, as the reader, soon begin to look for these phrases, and each time you read one you're reminded that the Lord has not stopped working in the hearts of people.
2. Repeated stories: Luke writes about three events—the Holy Spirit at Pentecost, Cornelius's conversion, and Paul's conversion—several times. As you encounter one of these stories for a second time, you might think to yourself, “I already heard that story,” but these events are so significant that Luke wants to make sure you remember them. Each time Luke wrote the story, he was writing it to a different audience and for a different purpose. Each retelling of the story gives us pieces of information not found in the other versions—significant facts God wanted us to know—and each retelling reminds us that the Holy Spirit is building His church.

10. See Acts 2:47.

11. See Acts 6:7.

- 3. Recorded sermons: Luke wrote that “the word of God spread,”¹² and one of the ways it spread was through sermons. Luke spent more verses recording sermons than he did describing miracles. Luke believed that hearing the Word of God was vital for a person to repent of his sin and turn in faith to the Savior. Through these sermons to high-ranking Jewish officials, kings, governors, and ordinary people we learn all we need to know to put our faith in Jesus Christ.

The book of Acts opens with Jesus’ command, “Be my witnesses in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and to the ends of the earth,”¹³ and ends with the declaration, “Therefore I want you to know that God’s salvation has been sent to the Gentiles, and they will listen!”¹⁴

Throughout the entire book of Acts, one theme is repeated: Jesus Christ who died, was buried, and rose again brings the good news of salvation by grace through faith. This gospel proclaimed in the first century still changes lives today, and the adventure that began at Pentecost still continues to this day.

“I will make you into a great nation, and I will bless you;
I will make your name great, and you will be a blessing.
I will bless those who bless you, and whoever curses you I will curse;
and all peoples on earth will be blessed through you.” (Genesis 12:2-3)

The LORD God made a covenant with Abraham to bless him, and then through him to bless the whole world. The covenant was fulfilled first when Jesus came into the world to save His people and then when the message of the gospel spread forth out of Jerusalem to Samaria and to the far reaches of the whole world. The LORD God faithfully kept His promise and continues to keep it today.

Two Men and the Gospel: Peter and Paul

The kids are bunched together, looking expectantly at you. Who will you choose to be on your team? You know that Matt has a powerful foot and is the fastest runner in the class. You also know that when Jake goes to kick the ball he misses it every time, and he never knows in what direction he should dribble the ball. What do you do? Do you pick the strongest, most athletic player or the one who doesn't know what's he's doing?

When God has a mission to accomplish, He usually doesn't choose the person who seems to be the strongest or the wisest.¹ God chooses a person with flaws and weaknesses, and then, through a divine work of grace, the Holy Spirit changes that person's heart and gives him all the wisdom and strength he needs to do the job.

In Acts God used two men, Peter and Paul, to spread the gospel into the world. Peter had only a simple Jewish education and Paul was not particularly strong, but God changed their hearts and used them mightily to spread His good news. In the first twelve chapters of Acts, Peter, an impulsive fisherman, boldly proclaimed the gospel in Jerusalem and then in the regions of Judea and Samaria. In the last half of Acts God changed an arrogant, murder-seeking Jewish Pharisee into a humble, persecuted missionary. God chose these two men, and they became faithful servants of Jesus Christ.

The Man Called Peter

Peter, one of the best known of Jesus' twelve disciples, was a man of strong opinions who often blurted out words without thinking. He and his brother, Andrew, came from the town of Bethsaida on the northern shore of the Sea of Galilee where they had a fishing business with James and John, the sons of Zebedee.²

Peter's given name was Simon, a Hebrew name derived from the name Simeon (Simeon was one of the twelve sons of the Hebrew patriarch Jacob). After Simon obeyed Jesus' call to be a "fisher of men,"³ Jesus gave him the name Peter, a Greek word meaning "little rock."⁴ The Apostle Paul often called Peter by the name Cephas, the Hebrew word for "rock."⁵

Like other Galilean Jews who were looking for the promised Messiah, Peter was intrigued when John the Baptist appeared out of nowhere, preaching in the Judean wilderness.⁶ He became a disciple of John the Baptist, and then after meeting Jesus and listening to Him for a time, Peter left John the Baptist to follow Jesus.⁷ Peter's mother-in-law was one of the first people that Jesus healed.⁸

Throughout all four gospels Peter appears over and over again. It was Peter who walked on the water to meet Jesus.⁹ It was Peter who made the confession, "You are the Christ" in front of all the other disciples, and not long afterward he saw Jesus standing on a high mountain in all His splendid glory.¹⁰ And it was Peter who denied Jesus three times. During Jesus' trial, when asked by a servant girl if he knew Jesus, bold Peter was not so bold, fearing that his life would be in danger if anyone thought he was a disciple of Jesus.¹¹ Peter later repented, and on an early morning after Jesus' resurrection, Jesus appeared to the disciples by the Sea of Galilee and reassured Peter of His love for him and asked Peter to "feed my sheep."¹²

Peter was changed by his encounter with Jesus on the shore of the Sea of Galilee after Christ's resurrection. Filled with the Holy Spirit, Peter preached to the crowds in Jerusalem on the Day of Pentecost,¹³ healed a beggar in the temple,¹⁴ and spoke fearlessly to the Sanhedrin, the ruling body of the Jews.¹⁵ He was even imprisoned because he refused to obey the Jewish leaders' demand to stop talking about Jesus.¹⁶

In Acts 1–12, the first part of Jesus' Great Commission takes place. In these chapters the story centers primarily around Peter as he preaches the gospel in Jerusalem and the surrounding area of Judea. Every day new converts believed as Peter and the other apostles preached the gospel to great crowds.¹⁷ Soon persecution scattered the believers, and Peter, along with John, was sent to Samaria to encourage believers and lay hands on them.¹⁸ Peter also had the privilege of being the first apostle to take the gospel to the Gentiles when he brought the gospel to the Roman centurion Cornelius.¹⁹

Peter served God for many years in Judea, but in Acts 12 the story shifts north to Antioch where the Apostle Paul, servant of the Lord, began spreading the gospel to the Gentiles. However, the books of Acts is not the last time we hear of Peter. Toward the end of his life, Peter wrote two letters (1 Peter and 2 Peter) to the believers scattered throughout the Mediterranean Sea region.

The Man Called Paul

How like God to choose a legalistic Pharisee intent on destroying Jesus' believers to be the man to take the gospel throughout the Roman Empire! The apostle Paul was this man, saved by grace and equipped by the Holy Spirit to be Christ's servant and messenger to the Gentiles.

Paul was a unique mixture of Greek culture and Jewish tradition. He was a Jew born in Tarsus, the principle city in the province of Cilicia in Asia Minor. In Paul's words Tarsus was "no ordinary city."²⁰ It was a large commercial city with a well-renowned university.

Even though Paul understood the Greek culture well and spoke and wrote the Greek language fluently, he was thoroughly Jewish as well, and had been taught in Jerusalem under the great rabbi Gamaliel. Under Gamaliel's teaching, Paul, whose Hebrew name was Saul, learned and accepted the strict teachings of the Pharisees. He memorized scripture and studied all the oral traditions such that he was "thoroughly trained in the law of our fathers,"²¹ and was zealous to preserve these teachings as truth that came directly from God. As a Pharisee, he actually believed that he had kept the law so perfectly that he was "faultless."²²

Paul had the privilege of being a Roman citizen. It is likely that his father or grandfather had earned the status of Roman citizenship through some type of service to the government, and this important distinction was passed on to Paul when he was born. Later it would be significant that Paul was a Roman citizen, not by purchasing citizenship, but by being born as a citizen.²³

In a way, Paul lived in two worlds. When he was in Jerusalem and was part of the Jewish world, he was called by his Hebrew name, Saul. It was under the name Saul that he persecuted the believers in Jesus and acted as a zealous Pharisee. Later, when he was traveling throughout Asia Minor and the Greek peninsula as a missionary to the Gentiles, Paul went by his Roman name Paul.

In the very early days of the Church in Jerusalem, the Pharisee Saul had an intense hatred for those who believed in Jesus. It was his belief that saying Jesus was the Messiah was blasphemous and destructive to the Jewish faith. He was so passionate about his belief that he delighted in the deaths of those who believed in Jesus Christ, and, with the approval of the Sanhedrin, he set out to kill them. He was present at the stoning of Stephen, and was sitting nearby and watching approvingly as Stephen breathed his last breath.²⁴

Eventually Saul went to Damascus carrying letters from the Sanhedrin to the local synagogue rulers. These letters gave him authority to capture more believers and take them to Jerusalem as prisoners. Along the road to Damascus, Jesus appeared to Saul. In a dazzling light from heaven Jesus confronted Saul with the words, “I am Jesus, whom you are persecuting.” Saul was blinded by the light and had to be led by his companions into the city. After three days Saul met with Ananias, who prayed with him so that Saul would be healed and filled with Holy Spirit. Saul’s eyes, physical and spiritual, were opened, and he got up and was baptized.²⁵

After his conversion, Paul turned his life in an entirely different direction. Instead of persecuting believers, Paul became an apostle to the Gentiles. He traveled throughout the Roman Empire, preaching Christ and building churches. Instead of seeing himself as perfect in keeping the law, he called himself “the worst of sinners.”²⁶ And finally, instead of thinking that salvation came by obeying God’s commands, Paul proclaimed boldly that “it is by grace you have been saved, through faith . . . not by works, so that no one can boast.”²⁷

In Acts, Luke wrote the account of Paul’s three recorded missionary journeys and of his trip to Rome for trial. In the rest of the New Testament we have thirteen letters that Paul wrote to churches or to individuals. In those letters he explained important doctrines of the Christian faith, and he detailed the manner in which we as Christ’s servants and the children of God should live to the glory of God our Father. All of us today can learn from Paul’s letters.

The book of Acts could be called the story of the Holy Spirit working through Peter and Paul, and this is the story we will be studying.

UNPACK IT FURTHER: God's Choosing of Those Who Serve Him

All through the Bible we have examples of God choosing people who think they are not able to do what He asks them to do. Read the following Bible passages to see some examples of these people and write their names in the blanks provided.

1. _____ Exodus 3:5-12, 4:10-13
2. _____ Judges 6:11-15
3. _____ Jeremiah 1:4-8
4. _____ Judges 4:1-10

Sometimes those whom God called were obedient and sometimes they were reluctant. All of these people thought they were too weak to do what God was asking. How is God asking you to serve Him? How do you feel ill-equipped to do what He wants you to do? Read 1 Corinthians 1:20-31 and think about what kind of people God chooses to serve Him.

THE OLD TESTAMENT IN THE NEW TESTAMENT REVEALED:

The Spirit of the Sovereign LORD is on me, because the LORD has anointed me to preach good news to the poor.

He has sent me to bind up the brokenhearted, to proclaim freedom for the captives and release from darkness for the prisoners. (Isaiah 61:1)

The verses from Isaiah 61 describe the people of the New Testament world. Many people lived in poverty, many were slaves, many were broken-hearted because of their harsh lives. All were captives of sin. The message of the gospel is that the Savior came to these people, bringing the good news of forgiveness of sin and fulfilling the words that the prophet had spoken so many years earlier.

The Religious/Social World of the First-Century Church

Imagine that you're a Christian living in one of the provincial cities of the Roman Empire. Maybe you came from a Greek family in Ephesus who became believers after hearing Paul preach about Jesus. Or maybe you're a Hellenistic Jew living in Corinth after having been banished from Rome by Emperor Claudius. (A Hellenistic Jew was a Jewish person who was born a Jew but lived outside Palestine and spoke Greek instead of Aramaic.)¹ You had listened to Paul and were persuaded that Jesus of Nazareth was the Messiah prophesied about by the Old Testament prophets. Or maybe you're a slave working in the household of a wealthy Roman senator. You're fascinated to hear about being free in Christ because every day you have no choices. You have to do what your owner tells you to do.

The Christian Church of the first century was a peculiar assortment of merchants and craftsmen, Jews and Gentiles, free people and slaves, the educated and the unschooled. How was it possible for such different people to get along with each other in one church? How could Jews who had been taught the Old Testament Scriptures be friends with Greeks who had once worshipped pagan gods such as Zeus and Artemis? It only makes sense when we remember that the Holy Spirit was working in the believers' hearts.

In this chapter you will learn a little about what the religious world was like in the first century. This information is helpful because when you can imagine what the world of the early Church was like, you can understand the book of Acts better.

Who Was in the Church?

The people in the New Testament Church were mostly city people. Most of Paul's ministry took place in cities, even though only a fifth of the Roman Empire's population lived in cities. At the time of the early Church, Rome was the largest city that the world had ever known. There were other large cities, such as Ephesus, Corinth, Antioch, and Alexandria, though they were not as huge as Rome.

In the world of the Roman empire everyone had his or her own place in society, and the first thing to consider in knowing your place was whether you were a slave or a free person. One out of every five people was a slave (that's about 20 percent of the population), and for those who lived in Italy and Greece, the number was as high as 30 percent. Imagine you're standing in line at the grocery store. There's a person in front of you and a person behind. If you lived in Rome during the first century, one of the three of you likely would have been a slave.

1. See Acts 18:2.

Slaves couldn't own property, get married, or have children. Slaves had no rights and were the property of their owners. Slaves on the farms had harsh lives, while the lot of the city slave, depending on who owned them and what skills they had, was sometimes a little easier. Punishment for disobedience was severe, including instant death, but in some households a hard-working, obedient slave could buy his or her freedom. In the church congregations there were many who were slaves.

If you were a free person, you were either a Roman citizen or not a Roman citizen. This was a huge distinction. A Roman citizen had certain privileges and legal rights that a non-citizen did not have. A Roman citizen had the right to vote, run for public office, and make legal contracts. When accused of a crime, a Roman citizen had the right of a fair trial, and if found guilty, he could appeal his case to a higher court, all the way up to the emperor.² Punishment for a Roman citizen could not include being whipped or tortured, and unless accused of treason, no Roman citizen could be given the death penalty or could be sentenced to die on a cross.³ Only a Roman citizen could serve as a Roman legionnaire, but a non-citizen could serve as an auxiliary soldier. After successfully serving his military time, an auxiliary soldier could become a Roman citizen. Being born as a Roman citizen had a greater status than earning citizenship later in life.⁴ If you were a Roman citizen, you were either a patrician (those who had high social standing and were wealthy) or a plebian (ordinary people).

So, in the empire there was a small group of wealthy, powerful Roman citizens, and a large part of the population that was very poor, working for a penny a day for the food they ate and sleeping either in makeshift shacks leaning against the side of a building or huddled outside on the narrow streets.

In between the very wealthy and the very poor were the middle class, which was made up of three types of people and which included approximately one-third of the population. First, there were the craftsmen (potters, carpenters, metalworkers, tentmakers, etc.) and the merchants. Usually these men and their families lived in an insula. An insula was an apartment-like dwelling with workshops and shops on the lower level and living space on the second floor.

A successful craftsman might have several rooms for his family to live in, but poorer families often all crowded into one room. Furnishings could be as few as a couple of bedrolls, a lamp or two to lessen the darkness, an earthen jar for storage, and a flat plate for each person. Because house fires were so common, people didn't cook inside the insula. Instead they walked to a nearby popina to buy hot food and drink for dinner.

3. See Acts 16:35-40; 22:22-29.

4. See Acts 22:22-29.

Latin Lives On

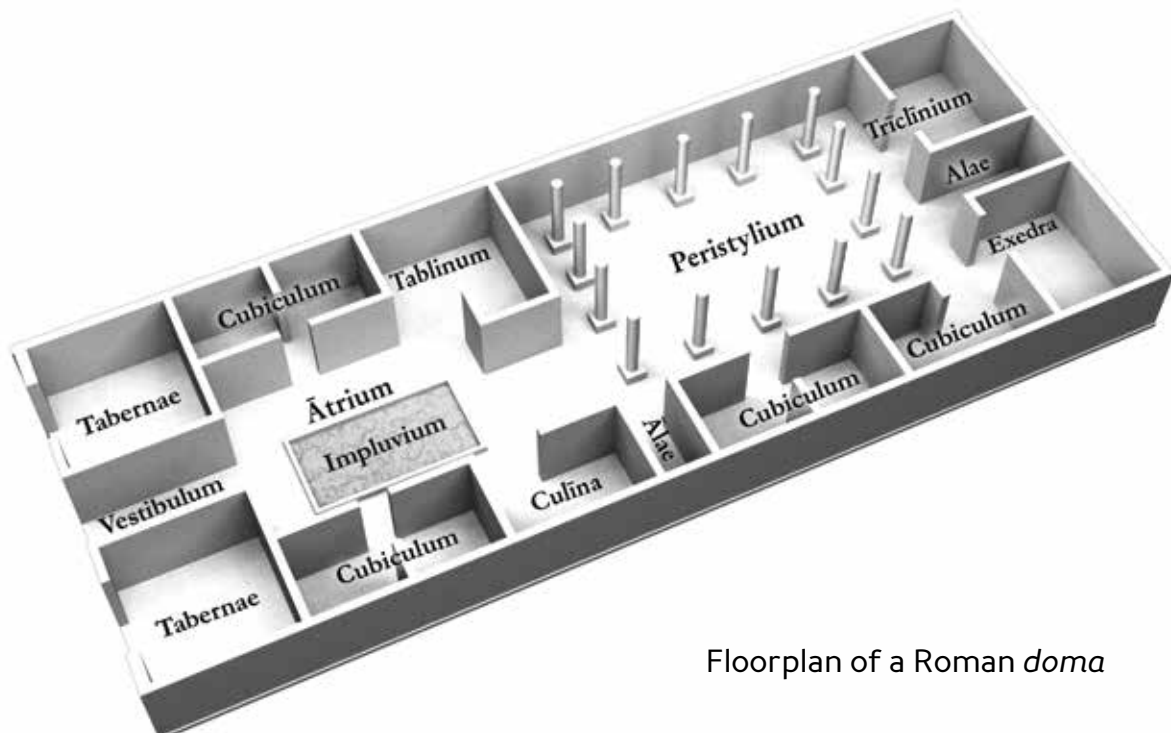

Have you noticed that sometimes the word insula is spelled with an a and other times it is spelled with an ae? The word insula is a Latin word and when it's singular, which means we're talking about just one apartment-like dwelling, the word ends in an a. When the word is plural, which means we're talking about more than one apartment-like dwelling, it ends in an ae. The same rule applies to the Latin words doma and popina.

The insula buildings were built of mud bricks, stucco, or wood with mud or brick floors. They had a central courtyard with a community well in the center and a common latrine (that's a type of toilet). Life in the insulae was crowded, noisy, and smelly.

A more successful craftsman or merchant might have lived in a doma, a rectangular, walled structure with rooms along the inside walls and a courtyard or two in the center. His workshop would have been attached to the side of the house. Inside the wall at the front of the doma was the tablinum (office), where business took place. The domae were decorated with colorful murals, wall hangings, and curtains. Rooms would be furnished with beds, tables, and basic necessities.

The second type of middle-class men were the apparitores, a Latin word meaning “servant.” These were men who could read and write and thus were able to work as scribes, heralds, or messengers for the civil magistrates of local government. Though these men would never be wealthy, they could advance in their positions and were financially well off.

The third type of middle-class men were the Augustales, former slaves who had been freed by their masters. These freedmen enjoyed the support of wealthy families for whom they had been slaves and had responsible jobs in shipping and manufacturing businesses owned by the families. The Augustales also could be part of a group of former trusted slaves called the collegium. Serving on the collegium was a one-year public-service position in which the members organized religious community events and planned the annual birthday celebration for the caesar. It was through this connection with the imperial cult of the caesar that these freed men received their name. The Augustales could become quite wealthy, but their social status prevented them from ever serving as a local magistrate or from having much influence in society.

So, what does this all of this tell us about the makeup of the churches that Paul established? It tells us that the churches were a strange mixture of people from the middle of society. Almost none of the wealthy patricians and very few of the poorest of the poor became part of the churches, but a number of people who lived as slaves in households did become part of the church.

In the church were believing Hellenistic Jews who had left Palestine years before and had made a permanent home in provinces of the Roman Empire such as Syria, Asia, Galatia, Cilicia, Macedonia, and Archaia. Most of these Jews were craftsmen of some type. For instance, Paul and his friends Aquila and Priscilla were tentmakers. The Gentiles in the congregation were people from the middle class, some struggling to make a living and others more comfortably well off, but few considered destitute.

Latin Lives On

What Is a Domus?

The Latin word domus means “house.” The English word “domicile” meaning “the place where one lives” comes from the Latin word domus.

Then there was Paul. With his education and his role as church planter, he could have received financial support from the churches or from a wealthy patron who viewed him as a philosopher worthy of being taken under his care. But Paul did neither. He supported himself as a tentmaker, even though working with his hands put him in a lower social class.

What Was Their World Like?

The Roman empire wasn't a Christian world, but it was a religious world. One book described the empire as “a supermarket of faith.” Come and take your pick of which gods you want to worship! In the provincial cities, shrines stood on every street corner, temples to favorite deities sat high atop hills overlooking the city, and families put images of local gods on shelves or in cubbyholes in their homes.

The Romans had an entire family of gods, and the Greeks had a different set that closely resembled the Roman gods. When the Romans conquered a city, they invited the gods of the enemy city to become part of their family of gods. Many people throughout the empire liked the mystery and glamour of the Egyptian goddess Isis so much that, other than the fast-growing cult of Caesar worship, the worship of Isis was the most popular religion.

The pagan Romans didn't have a book or a set of laws to guide their lives and worship as the Christians did, but they did make regular animal sacrifices on the temple steps. These sacrifices were part of community-wide religious festivals that included a day off from work, free food, and entertainment. Everyone was expected to take part in the festivals, and if they didn't? Well, they were just expected to! But it was impossible for Christians to join in these celebrations! The purpose of these community-wide events was to celebrate the goodness of the pagan gods, and believers in Jesus couldn't participate in events that included the worship of any deity other than Jesus Christ. Because of this, the believers often faced suspicion and rejection from their neighbors.

This was the culture in which the Christian believers lived. Not participating in the community's religious celebrations, not eating meat offered to idols,⁵ refusing to worship the emperor, and removing household gods from their homes—these were some of the choices that Christians had to make. These choices often resulted in losing customers at their workshops, being investigated by local authorities, and being persecuted by fearful and suspicious neighbors.

How Did They Worship?

In the crowded cities as people met at workshops to conduct business or at the popinae to eat a meal, Christians talked about Jesus. At this time, Christians didn't have church buildings where they could meet. Instead, they gathered in homes—small groups meeting in an upper room in an insula, or a larger group meeting in a domus owned by a wealthier church member. When they met, they shared a simple meal, sang hymns of praise, and listened as men such as Paul, Timothy, or Apollo instructed them in the way of the Lord.

The message of the gospel was attractive to the ordinary person. Christianity spoke about a personal God who loves people and gives grace.⁶ It was a religion of freedom from sin's bondage because of the sacrifice of Jesus, the Son of God. They liked the fact that Jesus Christ was a real person who had lived an ordinary life, worked with His hands, and suffered in all the ways that they were suffering.⁷ They were drawn together by the love of the people who loved Jesus.

So from the backstreets of Ephesus and in the insulae of Corinth the young church grew, and the gospel changed lives one person and one family at a time.

THE OLD TESTAMENT IN THE NEW TESTAMENT REVEALED:

But you, Bethlehem Ephrathah,
 though you are small among the clans of Judah, out of you will come for me
 one who will be ruler over Israel, whose origins are from of old,
 from ancient times.” (Micah 5:2)

The prophecy of Micah, written hundreds of years before Jesus was born, was fulfilled when a pagan emperor decreed that a census be taken of everyone in the empire. (see Luke 2:1-7). It was that census that brought Joseph and Mary to Bethlehem in Judea, where Jesus the Messiah was born, thus fulfilling Micah's prophesy." Even the actions of rulers who have no desire to worship the true God are governed by the sovereign plan of Almighty God.

The Political World of the First-Century Church (Part I)

In the first century AD, the Pax Romana covered the Mediterranean world like a warm blanket. Emperor Caesar Augustus and his Roman armies had conquered the Mediterranean world, and now that all the nations surrounding the Mediterranean Sea were under one government, an odd kind of peace settled upon the land.

What Was the Pax Romana and Why Is It Important?

The Pax Romana was a time of unity and peace in the Roman Empire.” After centuries of wars and conflicts, borders between provinces were safe to cross, people traveled freely, and nations were busy trading with each other. Though the conquered nations could never forget that ultimate power over the entire Mediterranean Sea area rested with the Roman emperor and though they knew that any political restlessness would be quickly squashed, all benefitted from how the Pax Romana changed the world.

A traveler moving throughout the Roman world would encounter many different cultures, but the Greek language and the good roads pulled the empire together. Greek was the commercial language, so everyone conducting business or writing important letters understood each other. Also, most common people were able to speak Greek, even if it wasn't their native language. The Romans had built a network of paved roads connecting all parts of the empire together. While the paved roads did make travel easier in some ways, it was still difficult and dangerous. Not only was travel hard, but the inns had bad food and cheap wine. Whenever possible, people stayed in the homes of family and friends.

Latin Lives On

Pax Romana means the “peace of Rome.” Pax is the Latin word meaning “peace.” The Pax Romana was period of peace during the reign of the Roman Empire when warring was essentially over and a general peace within the empire settled over the land.

Additional Information

See appendix H for some additional information about Roman roads.

The Mediterranean Sea, also called “our sea” by the Romans who ruled it, sat in the middle of the empire, with nations forming a large circle around it. When the winds were strong, journeying by sea was quicker than traveling by road, but no less dangerous. Violent winds and raiding pirates made traveling ten to fifteen miles a day on foot preferable to sailing as a passenger on a heavily laden cargo ship.

The Roman highway system and the Greek language, benefits of the Pax Romana, made it possible for the gospel to spread easily from Jerusalem into Judea and throughout the known world. It was just the right time in history. The sovereign God has planned it perfectly.”

In the world of Roman political rule, the influence of Greek philosophy, culture, religion, and language was strong. This influence was called Hellenism. These Greek beliefs explained how the universe came about and claimed that man could gain favor with, and possibly salvation from, the gods through his own reason and efforts.

A Bit of History

What Is Hellenism?

1. The word “Hellenism” comes from the Greek name for the nation of Greece, hellas.
2. It describes the Greek culture, which was heavily influenced by Greek philosophers such as Socrates, Aristotle, and many others.
3. It proposed that salvation came through human reason.
4. It proposed that the human body was evil and temporary, and the human soul was good and eternal.

Who Were the Hellenistic Christians?

The Hellenistic Christians were a group of Christians whose language and culture was Greek rather than Hebrew. When Paul, the apostle to the Gentiles, preached or wrote letters to the Hellenistic Christians, he used ideas familiar to them to present the gospel.

Obviously, these Greek beliefs didn’t agree with the Jewish scriptures. The Jewish people of Palestine and later the early Christian Church tried hard to keep their beliefs pure from the parts of Hellenism that were destructive to the Christian faith. Sometimes conflicts arose between believers with a Greek background (called Hellenists) and believers who came from a Hebrew background. One good effect of Hellenism, however, was that sometimes New Testament writers used Greek ideas to explain difficult Christian doctrines, and this made understanding the gospel easier for those with a Greek background. Another important benefit was that the New Testament writers wrote their books in the Greek language. Since most first-century people could speak Greek and most literate people could read Greek, writing the books in Greek made it possible for people of different backgrounds, Jew and Gentile, to read and understand what the New Testament writers wrote.

Who Was Ruling in the Roman Empire?

The highest ruler of the Roman Empire was the emperor. Although there was a political body called the Senate, by the time of Emperor Caesar Augustus’s rule, the emperor held all the real power over the empire. During the time of the New Testament, five different Roman emperors ruled the empire.

Caesar Augustus (27 BC–AD 14): Emperor Caesar Augustus was emperor when Jesus was born. It was his decree ordering that a census be taken of everyone in the empire that brought Joseph and Mary to Bethlehem and fulfilled the prophecy that the Messiah would be born in the small town of Bethlehem of Judea.¹

Tiberius (AD 14–37): The ministry of Jesus took place while Tiberius was emperor. Tiberius came to power at a time of peace. Although he was reluctant to become emperor, he was a capable ruler. He spent money wisely, though some Romans thought he was too stingy, and he made sure that the borders of the empire were safe from enemies.

The Roman Senate and the people didn't like Tiberius. As time went by, he began to avoid people. Eventually he left Rome to live alone on the island of Capri, and ruled the empire from a distance. When he died in AD 37, many Romans cheered.

Gaius Caligula (AD 37–41): Gaius, a grandson of Tiberius, was nicknamed “Caligula” (meaning “little boot”). Though Gaius was his first name, he was more popularly known as Emperor Caligula. He became emperor at the age of twenty-five and, even though he only ruled for four years, he was one of the most ruthless emperors that ever ruled the Roman Empire. This mentally unstable ruler believed he was the Roman god Jupiter and accepted sacrifices as though he was a god. When a few Greeks erected an altar to Caligula at Jamnia in Judea, the Jews protested to the emperor. Angered by the Jews' protest, Caligula decided to put a statue of himself in the temple at Jerusalem. Both Agrippa I, the king of Judea, Samaria, and Galilee, and Petronius, the Roman governor of Syria knew this was a bad idea and tried to stop Caligula. They knew that the Jews would react and might revolt. If the Jews rioted over the statue, something worse, such as an all-out war between the Jews and Rome, could start. These reasonable rulers tried to change Caligula's mind, but they were unsuccessful in doing so. Interestingly, before Caligula could build his statue, he was assassinated by a group of senators and praetorian guards (the soldiers who acted as the personal bodyguards of the emperor). The Apostle Paul began his ministry while Caligula was emperor.

Claudius (AD 41–54): Claudius, the uncle of Caligula, was a most unlikely choice to be emperor. He wasn't attractive, walked with a limp, and stuttered, but he was intelligent and was an excellent ruler. He expanded the empire to include Britain, gave King Agrippa I a greater territory to rule in Palestine, and increased trade to the outer regions of the empire.

Latin Lives On

The word “Senate” comes from the Latin word senex meaning “old man.” Generally speaking, the members of the Roman Senate were older aristocratic men who had political power and wealth.

1. See Micah 5:2.

The Apostle Paul made his first two missionary journeys during Claudius's reign. When the Jews in Rome created a disturbance, Claudius banished all Jews from Rome. Paul's friends, Aquila and Priscilla, left Rome at that time and moved to Corinth. Claudius was eventually poisoned by his wife Agrippina because she wanted her son Nero to be the emperor.

Nero (AD 54–68): At first Nero ruled well. Then in AD 59 he murdered his mother, and soon became a tyrant who caused terror in the empire. Like Caligula before him, he believed he was a god. Though the Senate opposed him, the ordinary people loved him because he provided great entertainments for them.

In AD 64 a huge fire burned down much of Rome. Afterward, Nero built a luxurious palace and many new buildings throughout Rome. When people became suspicious that Nero had set the fire on purpose, he blamed the Christians for the fire. That started a terrible persecution during which time Christians were burned alive and mauled by wild animals. Then Rome had a financial crisis, and rebellions broke out throughout the empire. Nero fled from Rome and killed himself before he could be executed by the Senate, which had condemned him to death. The Apostle Paul made his third missionary journey, wrote his many epistles, and was put to death in Rome during the reign of Nero.

Does it seem strange to call this period of history the Pax Romana when so many people lived under the control of a government that had absolute control and was often cruel in the way it treated people? If you were not a Roman citizen and lived under Roman rule, life could be difficult for you. Yet during the centuries of Roman rule, the people of the Mediterranean world were protected from the threat of war from outside nations. People could travel freely from place to place, and the common Greek language made it possible for people from one end of the empire to the other to understand each other. The sovereign God had planned it all perfectly. It was the right time and the right place with the right people chosen by God Himself to take His gospel message away from Jerusalem to faraway places.

Chapter 6

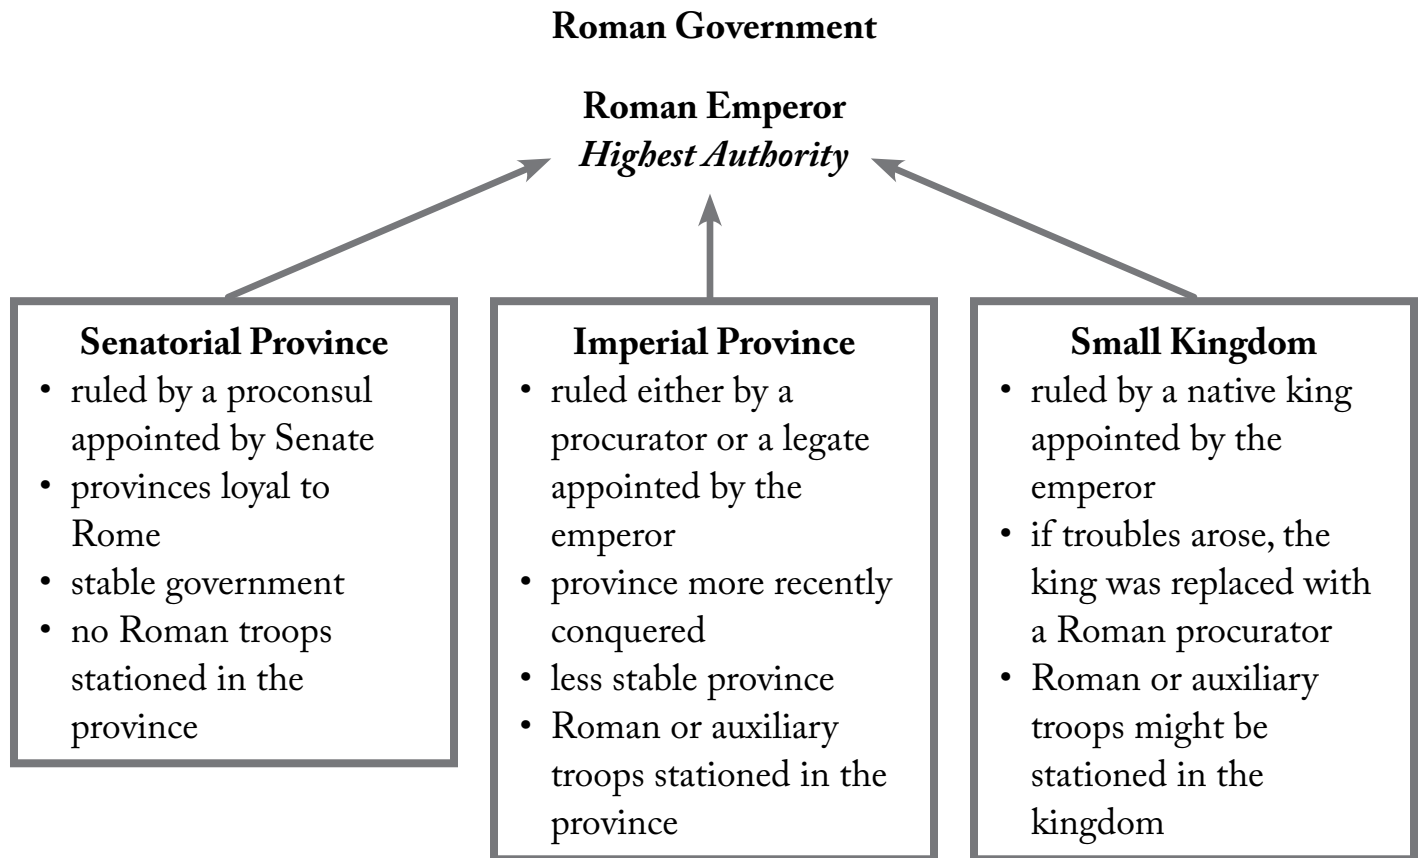

The Political World of the First-century Church (Part II)

WHO IS GOD? God, the ruler of all nations

LESSON THEME: God is always the one who is ultimately in charge of the whole world.

MEMORY PASSAGE: Romans 10:15

KEY FACTS:

THE OLD TESTAMENT IN THE NEW TESTAMENT REVEALED:

The LORD sits enthroned over the flood;
the LORD is enthroned as King forever.

The LORD gives strength to his people;
the LORD blesses his people with peace. (Psalm 29:10-11)

Even when Rome ruled the known world with its mighty power, the LORD sat enthroned in heaven and blessed His people with a peace the world cannot give.¹ For example, even when Paul and Silas were in prison in the Philippian jail, they had the peace of God. They sang songs and prayed in the worst of situations.² In Psalm 3 David wrote about the many foes who had risen up against him. Yet despite these enemies he was able to lie down and sleep, knowing that the LORD God would care for him.

The Political World of the First-Century Church (Part II)

As hard as we might try, understanding history is not always simple, and the political world of the first century is one of those complicated, and sometimes confusing, periods of history. It's hard to keep track of who ruled where and who was in charge of what. So, let's take a look and see what we can figure out.

The emperor was the highest ruler in the Roman Empire, and any government official who went against his will was removed from office, or even worse, executed! Ruling under the emperor were Roman procurators and proconsuls (also called governors) and native kings appointed by the Roman emperor. To complicate matters, the Jewish Sanhedrin had religious authority over the Jewish people, making sure that all the ceremonial laws were being kept as written down in the Law of Moses. In addition, the Jewish Sanhedrin acted as a court to settle legal arguments brought by Jews who had disagreements with each other. The Jewish Sanhedrin didn't have authority to make judgments in criminal matters such as robbery, murder, and treason.

Oh, I forgot to mention two other ever-present authorities. If you were a Jewish person living in Palestine, you couldn't forget the Roman auxiliary soldiers stationed throughout the country and the temple guard who worked under the high priest and who watched with keen eyes, making sure that nothing troublesome happened within the walls of the temple mount in Jerusalem.

Roman Government

Roman Provinces and Rulers:

Within the Roman Empire were two kinds of provinces: senatorial provinces and imperial provinces. In a senatorial province, the Roman Senate appointed a man with a rank equal to a senator to govern as proconsul for a one-year term. Many cities mentioned in Acts were located in senatorial provinces. Because these areas were usually loyal to Rome, there were no Roman troops stationed in them. The senatorial provinces included Sicily, Pamphylia, Cyprus, Macedonia, Crete, Achaia, Bithynia, and Asia.

Regions that had recently been conquered by Rome were imperial provinces. They were ruled by legates or procurators appointed by the emperor, depending upon the size of the province. Imperial provinces were those that might easily cause trouble and might resist Roman rule. Roman soldiers were permanently stationed in these provinces. Imperial provinces included Syria, Cilicia, Gaul, Galatia, and Britain.

When the Romans conquered a small kingdom, the emperor often allowed a local king to rule. King Herod the Great, who ruled at the time of Jesus' birth, was a native king. If there were any troubles in these kingdoms, the king was promptly replaced with a procurator. During most of Paul's ministry, Judea was not ruled by a king but by a procurator.

Additional Information

For more information about the Roman army, see appendix H.

During the reigns of Claudius and Nero (the time of Acts 13–28), seven procurators ruled Judea. Judea's capital was the coastal city of Caesarea Maritima, built by King Herod the Great. The procurators had five cohorts (600–1,000 men) of auxiliary soldiers under their command. (An auxiliary soldier was a local Gentile, not a Roman citizen.) When there was a serious disturbance, the procurator asked the Roman legate and his Roman legions, located in nearby Syria, for help. Four of the Judean cohorts were housed at Caesarea Maritima and one cohort was in Jerusalem at the Antonia Fortress.

Procurators tended to be cruel and corrupt. The Jews longed for the day when they no longer were under Rome's control. From time to time Jewish zealots would react against the strict control of the Roman governors, using acts of terrorism, kidnapping, and assassinations, but these freedom attempts led to more trouble between the Jews and their Roman rulers.

Roman Garrison in Jerusalem:

Looming over the northern end of the temple in Jerusalem, its dark shadow a constant reminder of Rome's power, was the Antonia Fortress. This huge stone structure was the home of one Roman auxiliary cohort and its commander. If there was the slightest inkling of trouble in the city, armed soldiers were on the spot to crush it. During the Jewish feast days when the population of Jerusalem quadrupled in size, the Roman procurator, who usually lived in Caesarea Maritima, would go to Jerusalem with additional forces. The awareness of his menacing presence helped keep the city under control.

Jewish Authorities

Kings of Palestine:

During the days of the early Church, only two kings, both descendants of King Herod the Great, ruled in Judea. (Procurators ruled Judea during most of this time period.)

King Agrippa I (AD 41–44 AD): By AD 41 all three sons of King Herod the Great (Herod Antipas, Herod Archelaus, Herod Philip) were dead or deposed. Emperor Claudius appointed King Herod Agrippa I, grandson of Herod the Great, as king over Judea. The Jews were happier with a king, even if he wasn't totally Jewish, than with a Roman procurator. Little by little the Romans gave Agrippa I more area to govern until eventually the size of his kingdom equaled that of his grandfather. King Agrippa I was the king who killed James, the brother of John, and imprisoned Peter for preaching about Jesus.³

Agrippa I was loyal to the Roman government, but the people, even the non-Jewish people, didn't like him. No one mourned his death. After he died, the emperor once again appointed a procurator to rule Judea, since Agrippa II was still too young to rule.

Agrippa II: Agrippa II eventually ruled in northern Palestine, but he never governed Judea, Samaria, or western Galilee. At one point the apostle Paul talked about his Christian faith with Agrippa II and his sister Bernice. Although the king never accepted Paul's faith, he did acknowledge that Paul was innocent of all the charges that the Jews in Jerusalem had brought against Paul. The accusations had to do with questions about Jewish laws they said he had broken. He said to Festus, the procurator, "This man could have been set free if he had not appealed to Caesar."⁴

The Jewish Sanhedrin:

This group of seventy-one Pharisees and Sadducees ruled from the temple in Jerusalem and had great civil and religious authority over the Jewish people. In one sense, the Sanhedrin had authority over every Jew throughout the whole world. Its orders were to be obeyed. In Acts 18:12-17 we read about the Jews of Corinth taking a formal request against Paul to Gallio, the proconsul of Achaia. Gallio, realizing the complaint concerned Jewish law, told

3. See Acts 12:1-19.

4. Acts 26:32.

the angry Jews to have the Jewish authorities settle the matter. When local Jewish courts disagreed with each other, the Sanhedrin would settle the dispute. Practically speaking, however, because of the distance, the Sanhedrin's direct civil authority had power only in Judea. While Jesus was alive, He was relatively safe from the Sanhedrin's threats as long as He was in Galilee because Galilee was under the rule of King Herod Antipas.

The Sanhedrin was made up of wealthy Sadducees and Pharisees, and the high priest was its leader. A member of the Sanhedrin held office for many years and often for his entire life. The Pharisees and Sadducees disagreed on many things, but most of them agreed on one thing: the crucifixion of Jesus of Nazareth.

The Temple Guard:

The temple guard, composed of priests and Levites who served at the temple, was under the authority of the high priest and the Sanhedrin. The captain of the temple guard was a high-ranking priest and was second in authority to the high priest. The Roman government allowed the temple guard to be armed with swords and staves. The temple guard kept order in the temple and arrested anyone, Jew or Gentile, who caused a disturbance. In Jerusalem and throughout Judea, upon the authority of the Sanhedrin, the temple guard could form a posse and arrest any Jewish person who committed a religious, civil, or criminal offense. The temple guard also had a jail where prisoners could be held for trial or be put in debtor's prison.

Answering the question "Who's in charge here?" was not always easy in the first-century world. Between the supreme ruler of the empire (the emperor himself), his many governors with different titles depending upon which province they ruled, local kings, and the Jewish authorities, the people had many people to whom they answered. One thing that Jewish people and Christian believers knew for certain: God, the Creator and Ruler of all the nations, was ultimately in charge of everything that happened. This truth gave courage and comfort to the early Church when they were persecuted for their faith and when they journeyed from city to city taking the gospel to the people all around them.

Review

Looking Backwards . . .

Moving Forward

Isn't our God amazing? Our God who knows everything (no one can teach Him anything)¹ and who has all power (no one can stop Him from doing what He wants to do) had the perfect plan for our salvation.²

Galatians 4:4-5 says, "But when the time had fully come, God sent his Son, born of a woman, born under law, to redeem those under law, that we might receive the full rights of sons." The LORD God who made a promise in Genesis 3:15 to send a Savior and who made covenant promises to bless the world through Abraham and his descendants fulfilled these promises at the perfect time in history.³

This perfect time also included the perfect time for Jesus' apostles and new disciples to take the gospel into all the world. Everything was in the proper place. The people of the first century were ready to hear about Jesus of Nazareth, the Son of God and the Savior of His people. And with good roads and a common language, God's messengers could take the message into new and diverse places.

Knowing how perfectly the first-century world was prepared by God for the spread of the gospel confirms to us that God is faithful. He provided all that was necessary for the apostles to preach the gospel. He also provides all that is necessary for us to tell the people we know about salvation in Jesus.

In unit II we will begin the story of the Jesus' continuing ministry through His apostles as recorded in the Bible. But first, let's do a quick review before we open the book of Acts.

1. See Job 21:22.

2. See Psalm 33:11.

3. See Genesis 12:1-3; 17:1-8.

Devotional Guide

“I am your God, and you are My people.”

The covenant is God’s promise to be the God of His people. He promises to be with them at all times, to protect them, to provide what they need, to forgive their sin, and to love them with an everlasting love. He is faithful to keep this promise even when His people do not faithfully love and obey Him.

What does the covenant mean to you? Read the following short stories and think about how knowing that the Lord God is your God would make a difference in each situation.

STORY 1:

Your father has been out of work for many months. Finally, he was offered a good job in a city 200 miles away. Dad is all excited about his new job because it is exactly the kind of work that he has wanted to do for years. Mom is excited because now they can buy a larger house in a good neighborhood for less money. Your younger brother is excited because he always likes to try new things and meet new people. You are not excited. You don’t want to change schools and be the new student in the classroom. You will miss all your friends, and despite what Mom says, you know you won’t see them again. After years of playing on township soccer teams, you were finally chosen to be on the traveling soccer team this season. Who knows if this new neighborhood even has soccer teams? Life for you is going to be completely upended. Nothing will ever be the same again.

■ Ponder It:

Read Isaiah 43:1-2, Psalm 100:5, and Hebrews 13:8 and use them to answer the following questions.

1. In a situation like this, what difference would it make that you belong to God?

2. What are some ways that God would show His faithfulness to you in a situation like this?

■ Pray about It:

If you were in this situation, what might you say to the Lord in your prayers? Write a short two- or three-sentence prayer as an example of how you would pray.

STORY 2:

Taylor has been your best friend for as long as you can remember. The two of you have been in the same classes in school, have explored every inch of the woods behind your house together, groaned over difficult math problems, and shared secrets that no one else knows. This summer a new family moved into the neighborhood with a child the same age as you and Taylor. This girl wants only one best friend, and that friend is Taylor. Now Taylor spends every afternoon at the new girl's house, swimming in her backyard pool and doing math problems together with her. You are angry, resentful, and lonely.

■ Ponder It:

Read Psalm 55:12-14, 16-17, 22; Psalm 3; 145:13-14; Hebrews 13:5-6; and 1 Peter 5:7 and use them to answer the following questions.

1. What does the Bible say about the faithfulness of people?

2. What does the Bible say about God's faithfulness to us?

■ Pray about It:

Friends may desert us, but the Lord never leaves us. He is always with us. Write a short prayer thanking the Lord for His constant presence and loving-kindness.

Bonus Activity:

Write a short story of a time that was difficult for you, but during which time the Lord showed Himself to be faithful.

UNIT 1

Dialogue

The Truth Detectives

WHAT IS A DISCIPLE?

OLIVER: Hey, Chloe, have you seen Grampy?

CHLOE: He said he'd meet us here in the park. Let's sit at this table under the tree.

OLIVER: I'm so glad we have Grampy. Conner's grandfather died last year. I can't imagine what it would be like if Grampy died. I'd miss him so much.

CHLOE: Me, too. I'm glad Grampy likes spending time with us. He never treats us like we're a bother to him, and he never gets impatient with our questions.

OLIVER: And I have lots of questions about everything.

(Grampy walks up to the children.)

GRAMPY: Hey, there are my favorite eleven-year-olds.

CHLOE: Hi, Grampy!

OLIVER: Hey!

CHLOE: Tell us again, Grampy, how you got your name. It fits you, but how'd you get it?

GRAMPY: Well, it all started when your older brother Luke was small. He'd toddle around the house singing silly songs about Mommy, Daddy, and Granny. With everyone else's name ending in an ee sound, he started calling me Grampy. I liked the name and it stuck. Now you call me Grampy, too.

CHLOE: It's funny how families give each other names. Daddy always calls me Pixie, and he calls you Li'l Dude, Oliver.

OLIVER: I used to call Luke by the name "Wuke" because I couldn't pronounce the letter L.

GRAMPY: You know, we have other names, too, because of our faith in Jesus. Can you think of any?

OLIVER: Pastor Bob calls us believers in Jesus, so Believer must be one of our names.

CHLOE: But many people believe in Jesus. They believe He was a good man or a wise teacher. That doesn't make them a true believer in Jesus, does it, Grampy?

GRAMPY: That's right, Chloe. Being a Believer is more than believing that Jesus was a good man. A true Believer believes that Jesus was both man and God and that He died on the cross and rose again so that sinful people like you and me could be forgiven of our sin. Being a Believer means that we've asked Jesus to forgive us and now we're trying to obey Him because we love Him.

OLIVER: It's like we're part of His family.

GRAMPY: Exactly.

CHLOE: Doesn't the Bible say that we're called Christians?

GRAMPY: Yes, that's another one of our names. The origin of that word is very interesting. When you look at the word "Christians," you see that it's made up of two parts: Christ and -ians. That -ians on the end there is called a suffix, which just means it's something added to the end of a word. The Greek suffix -ianos, which is where we get the -ians from, originally applied to slaves. So the name "Christian" means "slave of Christ."

CHLOE: Oh, I don't know if I want to be a slave!

GRAMPY: Well, I know what you mean, but if I were to be a slave to anyone, I would certainly want it to be to Jesus. Did you know that the Apostle Paul often called himself a slave or servant of Christ and the church?¹

CHLOE: Well, I guess you're right. But what does it mean to be a servant or slave of Christ?

GRAMPY: We're Jesus' slaves because He redeemed us from the slavery of sin to become His servants—servants of righteousness. The Greek -ianos ending on words means not only "slave" but also "one who accepts a person's teaching and follows him." As Christians, we accept Jesus' teachings, and we follow Him. Believers were first called Christians in the Gentile city of Antioch because the people in that city recognized that the believers' behavior, speech, and beliefs were like Christ's. If we call ourselves Christians, we should live like Jesus lived.

1. See Romans 1:1; 6:15-18; Colossians 1:24:25.

OLIVER: But I thought the followers of Jesus were called “disciples.”

GRAMPY: That’s a third name for believers in Jesus. We are His disciples.

CHLOE: I thought Jesus had only twelve disciples.

OLIVER: No, Jesus had many disciples. Don’t you remember how Jesus sent out seventy-two disciples to heal people and preach the gospel?²

GRAMPY: You’re both right. Jesus picked twelve men to be His close followers. They traveled with Him for three years, watching him do miracles and listening to Him teach. The Bible calls these men the twelve disciples or the Twelve.³ But He had other disciples, too. Can you name any of them?

OLIVER: Mary Magdalene was His disciple, and there were other women who were His disciples, too.

GRAMPY: That’s right. Jesus had many disciples. In Acts 1 there were 120 disciples who were waiting and praying before the day of Pentecost. The idea of being a disciple is an ancient one. Famous philosophers, especially the Greeks, had disciples. The word “disciple” comes from the Greek word mathetes or the Latin word discipulus, which both mean “student” or “learner.” A teacher and his disciple had a close relationship. They spent much time together, and after a while the disciple would begin to think and act like his teacher.

CHLOE: I see. If we are Jesus’ disciples, then we don’t just believe in Him, but we learn to think and act like Him.

GRAMPY: Yes. Jesus says that His words are to remain in us.⁴ That’s how we begin to look like Him. But it’s not easy to be a disciple of Jesus. Jesus warned people to think seriously before deciding to follow Him.⁵

OLIVER: Pastor Bob says that being Jesus’ disciple means that we might have to suffer like Jesus did. Some Christians are killed because they follow Jesus.

GRAMPY: Yes, they are. Sadly, in many countries, Christian churches are burned to the ground, pastors are put in prison, and Christians are killed. It’s not easy to be a Christian there. Jesus said, “If anyone would come after me, he must deny himself and take up his cross

2. See Luke 10:1-4.

3. See Matthew 10:1; 11:1; 20:17; Mark 10:32 and so on.

4. See John 15:7-8.

5. See Luke 9:57-62; 14:25-35.

and follow me.”⁶ When we are Jesus’ disciples, we must do what He wants us to do, not what we want to do. That’s “denying yourself.”

OLIVER: Well, I guess we have a lot of names: Believer, Christian, and Disciple. Did we forget any?

GRAMPY: One other name is very important. Sometimes a Christian will say he is a “Berean.” Do you know what that name means?

CHLOE: That’s a strange name!

GRAMPY: Let me explain. When the Apostle Paul preached in the town of Berea, many people believed in Jesus, and they took their faith seriously. After Paul preached, they would open up the scriptures and examine them carefully. They asked questions like, “Was Paul correct in what he said?” and “Was Jesus really the Messiah about whom the prophets had prophesied?” They felt they had to check it out. Only after they concluded that Paul’s words agreed with the rest of scripture did they accept Paul’s words.⁷ So, people today who examine scripture thoroughly to check out what they hear or read may say they are acting like the Bereans did.

OLIVER: It’s a good thing to check out what you hear at church to make sure it agrees with the Bible, don’t you think, Grampy?

CHLOE: But it takes so much time.

GRAMPY: Yes, it takes time, but we must guard our hearts and minds from error, and knowing what God says in the Bible is the only way to do that.

CHLOE: I guess you’re right.

GRAMPY: It doesn’t have to be such hard work, though. It can be a game—a detective’s game.

CHLOE: That’s a great idea! If studying the Bible were like solving a mystery, it wouldn’t seem so hard to do.

OLIVER: But how’s the Bible a mystery?

CHLOE: Here’s a mystery question: Why is Jesus the only way to heaven?

6. Matthew 16:24.

7. See Acts 17:10-12.

GRAMPY: Good question! Jesus said, “I am the way and the truth and the life.”⁸ Why don’t you research this question and see what you learn?

OLIVER: We can call ourselves the Truth Detectives. We’re looking for God’s truth in God’s Word.

CHLOE: Right. Let’s do it!

GRAMPY: OK, Truth Detectives, you have a week to find the answer. Go for it!

8. John 14:6.

Latin!

Latin is a rich, ancient language, and is still very much alive in the modern languages that we speak today. It plays a vital role training students in grammar, in categorical thinking about how a language works, in logical reasoning, and greatly expands a student's English vocabulary. Caveat emptor (let the buyer beware), these programs have made Latin the favorite subject of many students around the nation!

Spanish!

After English, Spanish is arguably the most easily applied second language for North American students to learn and master. Classical Academic Press's Spanish curricula are a blend of immersion and grammar-based study. We start with songs and vocabulary and go on to teach Spanish grammar for conversation—from its parts to its whole—so that students will know how to make sentences as well as recognize them by ear.

Greek!

Greek is one of the mother tongues of the English language, with many English words having been derived from Greek. Greek is also a perfectly orderly language, ideal to help us understand the structure of any language. Koine Greek, which is the focus in our texts, is also the history-rich language of the New Testament.

Logic!

There are several branches of logic, and our three levels of curriculum focus on teaching informal and formal logic, as well as supplying students with the tools to create their own logical arguments. Each logic text recognizes that students are living in the 21st century and applies logical concepts to real-life, and often humorous, examples. Mastery of logic is a requisite skill for critical thinking in any discipline and for the classical learning education.

Bible!

If you would like to teach your students the narrative arc of the Bible and show them how God has been at work in His people since before creation, you will find God's Great Covenant to be a unique and excellent Bible curriculum. Taught from a covenantal and reformed theological perspective, and rooted in Scripture, you will find this series to be a blessing to your classroom, Sunday School, or family.

Poetry!

If you have ever felt mystified by poetry, this book will lead you step-by-step to an understanding and love of this branch of literature, guided by a gifted poet and teacher. This accessible curriculum demystifies the practice of reading a poem slowly and carefully, introduces students to the elements of poetry (such as imagery and metaphor), and highlights the historical forms that poems have taken (such as sonnet and open verse). Learn how absorbing the best words in the best order changes your relationship to ideas.

Resources— because we all could use a little help.

Here at Classical Academic Press we understand the need for thorough explanations, enjoyable practice materials, independent student activities, encouraging collaborations, and the means to ask questions of other teachers! We also understand that these needs will vary among teachers and students, as well as their teaching and learning styles, and that learning happens in community. Our goal is to provide for you the resources you need, so that our curriculum is easy to use and so that your student's studies are enjoyable, relevant, and complete.
